Analysis by the Legislative Reference Bureau

Current law generally limits the total amount of revenue that a school district may receive from general school aids, including equalization aid, and property taxes. Several exceptions to the revenue limit exist. For example, the revenue limit is increased if a school district becomes responsible for performing additional services that are transferred from another school district.

This bill provides that, if the majority of eligible electors who are present at the annual meeting of a common or union high school district that receives no equalization aid votes to increase the school district's revenue limit, that limit is increased by an amount equal to the full value of the taxable property in the school district multiplied by one of the following: 1) if the school district operates only high school grades, one-third of a mill; 2) if the school district operates only elementary grades, two-thirds of a mill; and 3) if the school district operates grades kindergarten to 12, one mill.
